BurdickChocolate.com

A veritable zoo of treats: lemon-ganache-filled penquins, mice with almond ears, honeybees with hazelnut-honey filling. Pick the packaging too.

ShopLoveMe.com

Huge selection. You'll find love- and wedding-themed soaps, candles and chocolates—even candles that come disguised as chocolates.

Beau-Coup.com

Everything from edible favors, like wedding-cake cookies, to housewares, including martini glasses. Plus, a new section listing eco-friendly gifts.

Customize with a click

If you want something a little more personalized for your guests (say, with a monogram, logo or message) but don't want to create your own favors, consider these sources

ValseyAndMe.com

Refined (yet quite affordable) little scented soaps, each with a custom-printed wrapper (for a message or your names and wedding date).

CutiepieCookies.com

Pretty sugar cookies that can feature your favorite motif. Just e-mail the bakers a logo, clip art or a pattern, and they do the rest.

ABCChocolates.com

Choose from chocolates that spell out your new initials or a special message to loved ones (click on Custom Orders at the bottom).

KarenSmallbone.com

Browse the Idea Gallery to see the artfully assembled favors; then purchase the components personalized with your initials.

DIY on the www

For the do-it-yourselfer who prefers to avoid the crowded mall crafts shops, these Web sites offer all the ingredients (product, packaging and labels) for perfect mementos

NostalgicCandy.com

Click on Bulk Candy for a rainbow of choices. Go traditional with Jordan almonds or fanciful with brightly colored gumballs or jawbreakers.

ParaplueDesigns.com

These favor containers are pieces of art in the form of colorful blooms, multi-layered squares that open like flowers, or wild animals.

MyWeddingLabels.com

Way more than labels, including innovative boxes and bags. And, of course, a slew of stickers for almost any gift (CDs, wine bottles, etc.).

Telliegrams.com

Custom-printed favor boxes in unusual colors and patterns create a bold statement. Adorable ribbons make a charming presentation. ■
