et to Know Telliegrams.com

We're suckers for cute packaging, and these little boxes look just as great on the inside as on the outside. Vienna, Virginia-based Telliegrams.com creates sweet boxes in more than 30 colors and patterns that can be printed with messages on the inside. The company's Out-of-the-Box Invitations—ribbon-tied boxes that open to reveal event details printed inside (left)—make great save-the-dates or rehearsal dinner invites.

"One couple had directions to the reception site printed on the insides of pyramid-shaped boxes," says Kelly Sabine, who runs Telliegrams with her mother, husband, and sister. "The boxes were filled with candy and set out for guests to take as they left the ceremony site." Another clever idea: "We had a couple put doughnut holes inside boxes printed with directions to a brunch the following day," she says. Cost: Invitations start at $4 each; favor boxes start at $1 each.
